About the artist

Following a director-level marketing career, Sue trained as an Interior Designer at Chelsea College of Art and Design and ran a successful interior design practice in London. She has sculpted, turned wooden bowls and created figurative drawings and prints.

In 2017, she began creating 3D collage in mixed media, working primarily with paper but also metal and plastic mesh. Sue launched her new work and website in February 2017. Since then she has exhibited at several London-based art exhibitions and fairs as well as having a successful three-month solo show in the Plateaux Gallery within Thomas Goode in Mayfair over the summer of 2018. She has sold over one hundred works including commissions.

Sue's work is in private collections worldwide including the UK, US, Monaco, France, Cyprus and throughout the Middle East. Her private collectors include a former head of Trustees of the Tate Gallery.
