About the series:

Jamie's latest series of works, created for Open Eye Gallery, Liverpool's exhibition Ebb and Flow, examines the oldest Chinese community in Europe, as it exists today. Each photograph presents a dark, fragmentary cityscape, conveying a feeling of solitariness which is reflective of the outsider in contemporary society. Together the series presents a visual exploration of the isolation that can be felt in a city full of people, where human interaction may happen only on a base level; passing each other in shops, restaurants, and the street, like ships in the night.
