About the Artist

Born in 1967 in Cambridge, Adam Dant's interest in Printmaking began with an accidental posting to the 'Graphic Design' department of MS University, Baroda, India.

The experience he gained here served him well for his subsequent training at the Royal College of Art, The Hochschule die Kunst, Berlin and Cite Internationale des arts, Paris.

Adam's work gained notoriety in the latter half of the 1990s with his 5 year pamphleteering project 'Donald Parsnips Daily Journal.' Inspired by 18th century press, it saw the artist distribute 100 copies of the journal daily, and its combination of master draftsmanship and wry, irreverant humour set the tone for the artist's subsequent work, which has led to him being hailed 'a modern day Hogarth.'

Adam Dant's artworks chronicle London life in their densely wrought depictions of public spaces, where historical motifs mingle with present-day observations to create wryly humorous views of contemporary culture. Dant's combination of master draftsmanship and a wonderfully imaginative vision has led to him being hailed as a 'modern day Hogarth' and in was the recipient of The Rome Scholarship in Printmaking in 1993, and The Jerwood Drawing Prize in 2002
